Aims and Objectives of the Society

The aim of the Oceanic Art Society is to further the understanding and appreciation of Oceanic art. The focus is on traditional tribal art including contemporary art of the indigenous people of Melanesia, Micronesia, Polynesia and Australasia

Activities

- Regular presentations and seminars throughout the year. These draw from lectures by international speakers and local leading authorities, illustrated talks by field collectors, film screenings presented by their makers, and presentations by curators of art gallery and museum exhibitions.
- Bi-monthly Newsletter. This illustrated publication features international Oceanic art news, editorial pieces, member articles, book reviews, seminar reports, museum reviews, gallery and auction news, and information on OAS events.
- Annual OAS Tribal Art Forum. A two day symposium, hosted by major institutions, including seminars, access to collection material not on public display, museum tours and social functions.
- Events and Publications. The Society has presented exhibitions and fairs, often held jointly with other institutions, and drawing on members' expertise, collection material and passion. Publications include the book "Shields of Melanesia" and exhibition catalogues.

WHO SHOULD JOIN? The Society welcomes anyone with an interest in Oceanic art. Our membership is international and includes collectors, academics, artists, students, art dealers and museum professionals.
